“I realized my life’s mission at the age of 5, in London. I went sketching with my father in England drawing churches. He taught me to see, he taught me perspective at that age, he taught me that I could design anything and touch all aspects of our physical landscape. I remember drawing a cathedral facade and deciding I did not like the shape of the windows so I redesigned them. I also remember winning a drawing competition for children while sailing from London to Montreal on the Queen Elizabeth, I drew luggage (my own ideas of how to travel)... I was obsessed with drawing eyeglasses, shoes, radios, houses, throughout my childhood.”
